NEW CONFERENCES TO BE HELD TO END STRIKE IN DETROIT

Leaders Generally Admit That There is No Basis for Hope of Settlement

MAY FORCE HOLIDAY

Thousands of Workers Arrive
At Places of Employment Late

DETROIT, Aug. 21.—(INS)—New conferences were scheduled for today in an effort to terminate the A. F. of L. strike against the Detroit Department of Street Railways which crippled transportation facilities in the nation's fourth largest city and impeded work on defense projects.

Throughout last night and well into the early hours of this morning, Mayor Edward J. Jeffries conferred first with A. F. of L. leaders and then with leaders from a CIO union whose long-standing jurisdictional dispute with an A. F. of L. union led the latter to order a strike early yesterday.

The latest conference adjourned about 3.25 a. m. and those who participated generally admitted that there was no basis for hope of an early settlement. A new conference was slated to begin at 11 a. m.

Meanwhile, Jeffries was fearful that a general "labor holiday" might develop from the transportation strike. Although there were no direct steps in this direction, Frank X. Martel, president of the Wayne County Federation of Labor, admitted that the powerful Detroit Building Trades Council and other A. F. of L. affiliates had pledged full support of the walkout.

Interested observers at the Wednesday night meeting were Thomas J. Donahue, chairman of the State Labor Mediation Board, and John Y. Jennings, Federal conciliator representing the U. S. Department of Labor.

The A. F. of L. union voting the strike originally was division 26 of the

Davis Case Expected To Reach The Jury Today

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21.—(INS)—Following final summations by defense attorneys, the re-trial of retired Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis and Morgan S. Kaufman, Scranton attorney, on charges of conspiring to obstruct justice, was expected to reach a jury of nine men and three women today.

The first trial of the pair, accused of conspiring to "sell justice" to the bankrupt film magnate, William Fox, for $27,500 in "loans" ended in a hung jury last May. Fox pleaded guilty to conspiracy and awaits sentence.

In a three-hour summation, Prosecutor Walter H. Gahagan, Jr., charged that both defendants were "caught in contradiction after contradiction" during the four-week trial. Davis and Kaufman both flatly denied obtaining money from Fox while his bankruptcy appeals were pending before the jurist.

Gahagan declared the Government's accusations were supported by a mass of interwoven documentary evidence and testimony from "wholly independent" witnesses. The defense case, he said, is supported principally by the personal testimony of the two defendants.

Among nine points of Government evidence, the Prosecutor cited the "unshaken statement of William Fox that he gave $15,000 to Morgan S. Kaufman and $12,500 to Davis." The trial was heard before presiding District Judge Hugh D. McLellan, of Boston.

Bensalem township, $6,825.00; Bristol borough, $11,944.36; Bristol township, $5,471.54; Morrisville borough, $12,347.18; Quakertown borough, $17,281.44.

DOYLESTOWN COUNCIL TO LEASE NEW OFFICES

Municipal Offices and Police Headquarters To Be Established in Hart Bldg.

IS BEING RENOVATED

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 21.—Doylestown Borough Council is going to move into new quarters, having leased the former Dr. C. Louis Siegler building on North Main street. The building is now being renovated by the new owner, George Hart.

After considering the offer of George Hart to rent the building on North Main street, Council accepted the proposition which calls for an annual rental charge of $800 plus 10 per cent of the cost of improvements.

Councilman G. Thawley Hayman spoke at length on the subject and expressed the opinion that it was a good move to change the Borough offices from the second floor of the Fire House to the Hart Building, for numerous reasons.

It was estimated that the rental for the new headquarters will amount to approximately $125 a month, not counting janitor service. The present headquarters for the Borough offices cost $275 a year and the police headquarters cost $120 a year. Council will enter into a 10-year lease with the owner of the Hart Building.

Nazis Claim They Prevented Dam Destruction

Berlin, Aug. 21.—By a series of swift thrusts deep into the Ukraine, German blitz troops have prevented Soviet forces from destroying any more than a few minor connecting locks of the gigantic Dnieperstroi Dam, Berlin officials asserted today.

While the High Command announced capture of Novgorod and Narva on the Leningrad front and Kherson, "gateway to the Crimea" near the mouth of the Dnieper, German spokesmen denied widespread London reports that retreating troops of Marshal Budenny had laid waste the huge power dam built under American supervision.

Actually, it was said, fast-moving motorized German columns frustrated destruction of the dam and also occupied the western side of a second water power keypoint at Zapozorsk.

As a result the spokesmen continued, the entire Dnieper system has been saved and will be ready for immediate use after a few minor connecting locks which the Russians blew up have been repaired.

German guns moved up to sweep all approaches to the dam. The remnants of Budenny's forces are being shoved back to forestall future dynamiting attempts.

Destruction of the dam would require tons of explosives deeply imbedded in its foundation. Budenny, it was said, used the dam itself as a bridge to cross the Dnieper River and will be put to the same use by German forces.

Meanwhile, the Luftwaffe, supported by long range artillery, kept up an incessant bombardment of Odessa.

Arrest 6,000 in Paris

Vichy, Aug. 21.—In a five-hour roundup of the entire working class area around the site of the ancient Bastille, German-controlled authorities in Paris today arrested 6,000 non-Aryan "dissidents," according to word received in Vichy.

The sweeping raids encompassed the whole Arrondissement in the eastern section of the former capital, bounded on one side by the historic Place de la Republique and on the other by Pere Lachaise cemetery.

News of the arrests, published officially by the Paris press, followed widespread reports of unrest among Jewish, anti-Nazi elements in various parts of France.

List of Locations Where Weeds Are Objectionable

MUST BE CUT AT ONCE

Notices are to be forwarded within the next few days to a list of property owners where weeds have been permitted to grow to an objectionable height and along sidewalks.

Police have compiled a long list of lots where the weeds are high and notices will be forwarded to them as soon as ownership of the plot has been established.

Secretary of Council William J. Lefferts is now tracing ownership of the vacant lots where weeds have been reported as being objectionable and as soon as this list is completed, then legal notices will be served.

If the lot owners do not comply with the notice and have the weeds cut, the police department will then proceed to enforce the orders of borough council. Some of the notices have been mailed.

JAP ARMY-NAVY RIVALRY

The reader of the daily dispatches from the Orient should bear in mind that there exists within the unit of Japanese armed forces a rivalry between the Japanese navy and the Japanese army. It is clan rivalry.

The navy belongs to the Satsuma clan. This clan resents the pretensions of the clan which dominates the army. In Tokyo the army usually shows the political edge on the navy. This breeds in navy men an eagerness to excel the army in initiative at the battle front.

This matter is of importance because in its eagerness to beat the army to the draw the Japanese navy may indulge in some piece of audacity such as a sea assault on Singapore.

VETERINARY PROGRESS

The seventy-eighth yearly convention of the American Veterinary Medical Association just concluded in Indianapolis, brought together members of the profession from all parts of the United States and several foreign countries. The sessions included clinics where leading veterinarians demonstrated new procedure in the treatment of animal ailments.

There is too little general recognition of the part veterinarians play in the lives of the American people. They are not, as some suppose, in a class that confines its work to alleviating the ills of pet dogs or answering calls when a horse is sick. Their principal work has been directed toward the eradication or control of diseases that affect all types of animals.

Through their efforts hog cholera has been almost eliminated, diseases of cattle have been held to a minimum and all other live stock which has a vital part in the farm economy, has reached new standards of perfection. Veterinarians of this country present a first line of defense in protecting the public's supplies of meat and dairy products.

FREEZING LOAN CROPS

Debate between Claude Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture, the "Cotton Ed" Smith, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, over freezing the huge government loan cotton and wheat stocks during the emergency as a price-sustaining policy is directed toward influencing the House on this measure, which has already passed the Senate.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has joined Secretary Wickard in opposing the freezing bill. Morgenthau said: "It would be terrible to freeze government stocks and we will be very, very sorry later if we don't make it possible to release the government-owned cotton now when we have a chance."

As passed by the Senate the bill permits disposal of these surpluses for relief purposes, for use in any foreign country whose defense is deemed vital to the United States and for export so long as the Secretary of Agriculture finds that such disposal does not lower the domestic price.

The Senate enactment would be particularly bullish as to cotton. The wheat crop this year is the third largest in history and will be ample for all needs. But the estimated cotton crop of less than 11,000,000 bales might not suffice for enlarged domestic and export needs. If a pinch developed, cotton might go sky high whereas there is scarcely that prospect in the case of wheat.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

One of the most memorable stories ever brought to the screen is that of a woman who fell in love with 2000 babies. She is Mrs. Edna Gladney of Fort Worth, superintendent of the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society, who has devoted thirty years of her life to child welfare—to finding childless homes that needed a baby to bring complete happiness. When Mrs. Gladney learned that her life had inspired a motion picture she immediately named the star she wanted to recreate her life—Greer Garson, the lovely red-headed, green-eyed actress who rose to stardom overnight as "Mrs. Chips" in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." Starred with Miss Garson in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, which opens today at the Grand Theatre, is Walter Pidgeon, who recently gave an outstanding performance in "Flight Command." He plays Sam Gladney, who shared his wife's enthusiasm for making a better world for babies. Filmed in Technicolor, the film reveals for the first time the full beauty of Miss Garson. When you see the red-headed star holding a red-headed baby in her arms you will agree that only Technicolor could do them justice. The story really has two great love themes, the romance of Sam Gladney and Edna Gladney and their love of babies. Mrs. Gladney, who has accomplished her work quietly and simply, will now receive the acknowledgment her work merits, that of one of America's foremost humanitarian. The screen has never dealt with a theme more timely nor powerfully dramatic. Featured in the outstanding supporting cast are Felix Bressart, Marsha Hunt, Fay Holden, Samuel B. Hinds, Kathleen Howard, George Lessey, William Henry and more than 800 children and babies. The picture was directed by Mervyn Leroy, who made "Escape" and "Waterloo Bridge." A stirring, unforgettable entertainment treat for the entire family is "Blossoms in the Dust."

RITZ THEATRE

Nick Stuart, famous star of silent picture days, makes his screen comeback in Monogram's "Pride of the Bowery" with the East Side Kids, now at the Ritz Theatre.

Stuart, who is a native of Dayton, Ohio, began his screen career in Mack Sennett comedies. From comedy he went to full-length major features such as "Why Leave Home," "Joy Street," and "The River Pirate." Always a musician with the advent of talking pictures, Stuart decided to organize his own band and tour the country. In 1938 he returned to Hollywood to make several shorts for RKO using his orchestra. "Pride of the Bowery" marks Stuart's first dramatic role since the advent of sound.

BRISTOL THEATRE

With James Stewart and Paulette Goddard in the top stellar roles dish-ing out a million dollars worth of fun, laughter and romance, James Stewart's first Hollywood production, "For O'Gold," featuring the Horace Heidt band and its famous radio music, its grand premiere at the Bristol Theatre. George Marshall directed the picture and the cast supporting the stars features Charles Winninger, Mary Gordon and Jed Prouty.

Among the many sets built for "For O'Gold," the largest was the country club set, representing the veranda, lawns and arbors of a mythical Easterner Country Club. After two weeks of work by scores of carpenters, electricians, painters, sign painters and assorted technicians, this set occupied the area of a square city block.

SYNOPSIS

On his way to Haverstraw to visit his fiancée, Jane Rider, David Farland prevents a young woman from jumping off a ferry. She entrusts him with an envelope, requesting that he deliver it to the socially prominent Richard Garrison, if she doesn't call for it in a week. The girl's eyes dilate with fear as she sees a certain couple watching them. "I knew he wouldn't play fair!" she exclaims and rushes off, dropping a compact initialed "C.B." and pamphlet reading "Americans Warning!" On the train, David discovers the envelope is gone! At Haverstraw, he again sees the mysterious woman. Jane and he follow her taxi but it disappears. Stopping at a gas station, they meet Mat Breanu, wealthy Broadwayite, and his friend, Fan Rubley. David drops the compact. Breanu recognizes it. When David refuses to reveal where he got it, Mat tells him to "Give me or Garrison a ring, Monday." What did Breanu know about the whole affair? Shortly after, in a railway station store, David and Jane encounter the couple who had frightened the girl on the boat. A fight ensues but the couple escape. Returning home, David and Jane are met by Mrs. Rider and Kurt Helm, a writer, who lives in a nearby cabin. Kurt is infatuated with Jane and has threatened to win her from David. As the latter goes to take his baggage from the rumble seat, he pulls back in horror. Stuffed into it is the body of the girl David met on the ferry. Breanu drives up with Fan and Richard Garrison, his lawyer, and identifies the body as that of his wife, Carrie. When state troopers arrive, Kurt has disappeared. Later, he warns Jane against David talking too much about Carrie's murder or the propaganda pamphlet. While troopers are questioning Mat and David, the latter cries "The couple!" and dashes off into the bushes.

CHAPTER NINE

It was ten o'clock Sunday morning. The telephone buzzed close to Mattila Breanu's dark head. He tossed under rumpled covers, dimly conscious that he was in his own apartment, after a hideous experience. Then he remembered. It was Carrie of whom he had dreamed; poor beautiful Carrie, brutally murdered and thrust into the rumble seat of Jane Rider's coupé. It all came back: the flash of cameras on the country road below the old farmhouse... troopers, David Farland's eager voice telling all he thought he knew.

No, it couldn't be true. Not Carrie. Not now when, if he made any slip, everything he had worked for would be lost; issues more vital than women had loved. And he had loved Carrie.

The telephone went on ringing. He wouldn't answer it.

Why had he looked at Carrie's dead face last night? Her big gray eyes seemed frozen with terror. The bluish gash of a knife had slanted across the bloodstained ruffles of her blouse. But no knife had been found. She had been killed between seven-thirty and eight-thirty, they said. Breanu groaned. Better answer that devilish phone.

Slowly, the "Broadway big shot" dragged the lacquered red instrument across the burgundy silk spread, resting it on his hunched knees. "Breanu speaking," he muttered. "Oh!—that you, Deeck?"

Dick Garrison wasn't his usual pleasant self. "Why the devil did you run away last night?" The lawyer sounded like a man despising his job, who has been up, shaved, showered and dressed for hours.

"Fan was ill. So I drove her to town. What is wrong with that?" Garrison said sharply. "Every-

Garrison said sharply. "Every-

Garrison said sharply. "Every-standing by her redhead. As for you, Mat—I had to give plenty bail." Breanu shifted the telephone to his other knee. "That young Farland is a fool!" he snarled. "It was he who ran away, as you call it. He had Carrie's compact. And why did he rush into those bushes, looking for that couple he talked about? What couple?"

"According to my story, a man and woman," Garrison said softly. "We didn't catch them, but he swore they were the couple he saw on the ferry; the couple Carrie was afraid of; the couple who attacked him in Macklin's story. You wouldn't know anything about them—would you, Mat?"

Breanu smoothed back his damp

"Fan was ill so I drove her to town. What is wrong with that?"

black hair. "I know nothing," he denied violently. "You are my lawyer, Deeck. I pay you well. Get me out of this. Let me bury my Carrie with no more talk."

Garrison's laugh came dryly over the wire. "I don't need your money, sweetheart. Now listen—" His voice cracked like a whip. "Get wise to yourself. You know more about this than you're telling. Carrie wasn't murdered because of money or jewels. She left them when she left you. This case has—angles."

"Angles?" Breanu's voice was thick. "You may be right, Deeck. I have my ideas. I shall kill the guy who killed Carrie."

"So you have ideas?" Garrison commented quickly. "Are you thinking of a man or woman? You mean the couple?"

"Never you mind that," Breanu said far back in his throat.

"Better come clean, Mat, with any information you have," Garrison sounded grim. "I have a feeling you'll be next. And I wouldn't take a nickel for Jane Rider and her bright boy's life until this case is solved. You've all done too much salvering for your own good," he added, as if he had reached the end of his patience. "I'm coming right over," and hung up.

Breanu set the telephone on the table, and slid his short powerful body along the cool sheets. He was sick. He stared at the life-sized portrait of Carrie on the buff wall opposite his bed. A Frenchman who once loved her had painted it as a wedding gift, three years ago. She stood draped in sheer gray tulle; her thick honey-colored hair capping her white skin, her lips chanting in a crescent smile.

Carrie Swift she was, before she eloped with him; a socialite, as the papers described her. He never had been her sort. He knew that. He had money all right, but at what cost? Not even the cost? Not even the cost? Not even the streamlined gangsters he hobbled with guessed the constant danger of his work. And there had been Carrie always to protect from spies among his own countrymen—people who hated him.

Carrie loved parties at the exclusive night clubs. They played along the fringe of cliques Carrie would have belonged to, were it not for him, but she didn't seem to care. She danced, drank only champagne, and held her head high, always surrounded by men, Breanu tightly, jealously watching at her side.

He touched the bell to summon Doremus, the colored man who had served him two years before he married Carrie. Doremus was his only faithful friend, Breanu thought with bitterness. Who could he trust? No one—not even Dick Garrison, whom once he had looked up to as a clubman, a sport, an ace attorney with connections. He had met Dick through Carrie, of course.

Doremus must be out in the hall, gossiping as usual with the elevator boy. Even with a war in Europe crowding out home news, everyone by now had heard of Carrie's murder. The papers—He must look at them soon.

Her family had never forgiven her. She pretended that didn't hurt. It did, though. Breanu clenched his fists. There had been another man, tall, blond, who whispered in Carrie's ear as they waited or rhumba'd in the night clubs. From the first Breanu had wondered what the fellow's racket was. No one seemed to know, except possibly a reporter called Pete Jefferson who, one night at a bar, dropped a word in answer to Breanu's too casual question.

Pete, idling over a daiquiri, had said laconically, "Ever hear of patrioteers—those birds who sell—or sell out—the country? He's one of them. We can't pin anything on him. He's slick as an eel."

That was what the row was about when Breanu got Carrie home that night. He didn't want this bird nosing into his affairs. He didn't want Carrie to have anything to do with him again.

"I'll see whom I please," Carrie had defied him.

Well, he guessed he was savage, jealous. He said a lot of things. Fan was there. Then Carrie slapped him. He told her to go. And she had gone.

The worst of it was that Breanu only vaguely remembered what the so-called "patrioteer" looked like.

NOVA ALL SET TO SCORE KNOCKOUT IN LOUIS BATTLE

Challenger of Champion Has Made A Wonderful Comeback

HEALTH IS RESTORED

In Fine Shape After Six Weeks of Light Training in Maine

By Al Blackman

I. N. S. Sports Writer
BOSTON, Aug. 21.—(INS)—A year ago he could barely walk two blocks. A streptococcus infection had ravaged his 200-pound frame, leaving him a physical wreck.

On September 19 he will climb through the ropes into the boxing ring at Yankee Stadium, New York, with perhaps the best chance any fighter has had of the nineteen who have attempted to knock the heavyweight championship crown off the head of Joe Louis.

Lou Nova today is living a Cinderella career that matches Jim Braddock's fabulous life. He was "washed up," finished. Tony Galento had smashed him into subjugation, sent him to a hospital, caused his retirement at the age of 25.

But Lou, who isn't nearly as "goofy" as his publicity men would have you believe, lived his life the way he thought best.

His is a clean, simple—most rigorous life. He said he sometimes wondered if wholesome living would bring back his health. It did. You should see the lad.

Tanned by the sun after six weeks light training in the lake country of northern Maine, Lou Nova visited here enroute to his training quarters in New York.

"I feel wonderful," he said. "What a fight it should be!"

He gave the impression that he wished he could see it, too. His blue eyes danced with excitement.

"Gee, just think, a year ago I was all through. Today, I'm the number one challenger for the heavyweight title."

"Think of it," Lou enthused, "the two hardest batters in the business fighting it out for the big prize. Please don't think I'm too cocky, but I'm faster than Joe and when I tag him with that 'cosmic punch,' well did you see what it did to Max Baer?"

Lou pranced around his hotel room here, seized Hertha Lou, his 28-month-old daughter, and swung her on high. "Yippee, Louiee," yipped Hertha. "Yippee," echoed Lou.

URGE GOLF TO IMPROVE HEALTH OF CITIZENS

By International News Service

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21.—(INS)—Golf—ideal exercise for thousands of Americans who couldn't stand the strain of more strenuous sports—will play an important part in building up the nation's health, according to John B. Kelly, National Physical Training Director of the Office of Civilian Defense.

"Golf is a sport that almost any person can play," asserted Kelly who, at 51 has kept in unusually good physical shape. "It's not too strenuous and, unlike many other sports, you don't have to get a large group to get the benefit of it."

"We know there are millions of golfers throughout the country who will agree that the sport is one of the finest to keep a person in condition, but we'll have to interest a great many more in the game."

Kelly, former Democratic City Chairman, has established national headquarters for the physical education drive in Philadelphia. He hopes to receive the assistance of prominent athletes throughout the country in the campaign to improve health by having citizens engage in exercise.

"I'm getting letters every day," he declared, "containing offers of co-operation from the officials of almost every known sport. Bicycling, roller-skating, ice-skating, lawn bowling and all sorts of sports like these which are not so popular as football, baseball, golf, tennis and the like, are being suggested as means of helping citizens regain or keep their health."

"It is our intention to use every available means to reach the end. Soon we'll be going ahead at full steam. Then we'll have the co-operation of leaders in every field. Certainly, golf will be one of the headlines."

"Ed Dudley, president of the Philadelphia Professional Golfers Association, has agreed to assist in every way possible. Not only will we have the aid of professionals and star amateurs, but I'm going to try to get some of the finest of women golfers to assist with the program. Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, Patty Berg, Helen Hicks, Betty Jameson and Virginia Van Wie, among others, will be asked to help."

Public links golfers also will find a definite place in the program, Kelly added.

Doylestown Council To Lease New Offices

ough's consulting engineer, there will be a service charge of $6 per year for every sewer connection plus 40 per cent of the water bill, to be billed quarterly with the water bill. The ordinance will be effective January 1, 1942.

It was suggested and agreed upon by Council that users of private wells in Doylestown have a sewer rate established immediately and billed at once.

Councilman Hayman, chairman of the street committee, invited all Council members as well as all residents of the town to inspect the new section of Belmont avenue in front of the Doylestown Emergency Hospital. Borough workmen did a grand job on this street project.

Complaints were voiced last night by a number of residents of the town concerning an alleged smoke nuisance from the rubber mill at Franklin and State streets. An effort will be made to have the alleged nuisance abated.

Council decided to notify owners of vacant lots in Doylestown to keep them mowed and free from weeds and at the same time considered a strict enforcement of the ordinance dealing with lots improperly cared for.

Councilman Justin Ely, chairman of the police committee, was given the authority to get prices on new police uniforms and to act as he saw fit.

Chief of Police Felix R. Gowan submitted his monthly report showing 26 arrests and fines amounting to $354 collected for the Borough in addition to $25 in fines for the State. His department investigated 56 complaints during the month and issued 39 warnings. Eight accidents were investigated.

The arrests were as follows: For overweight trucks, 9; drunk and disorderly, 4; violation of two-hour parking, 1; driving wrong way on one-way street, 1; desertion from United States Army, 1.

New Conferences To Be Held To Terminate Detroit Strike

amalgamated street, electric railway and motor coach operators of America which has held exclusive DSR bargaining rights for 40 years.

The A. F. of L. union has been fearful the city would decide to grant concessions to the CIO which has, during the past few months, gained many new members among street car and bus operators.

Although disgruntled at first, Detroit's population which depends on the street cars and buses for transportation to work daily began to take the situation in stride and with good humor. Many automobile plants holding defense contracts reported yesterday that thousands of workers appeared late, thus impeding production. The Hudson Company closed down three plants but they were expected to reopen today.

Traffic on Detroit streets was unusually heavy, despite the absence of buses and street cars. Private automobiles usually kept in garages during the week were brought into service and those persons who had no automobiles were carried to work by neighbors with cars or by taxi. Many so-called "jitneys" were in operation, the drivers of such charging a nominal fee to transport persons to their work.

The tieup has affected 5,500 DSR workers. The municipally owned line transports about 400,000 persons to their jobs each day with an aggregate of 1,200,000 passengers being carried daily.
